He grew up in northern Michigan. At the age of 18, he joined the U.S. Navy as a avionics technician aboard an aircraft carrier in the Persian Gulf. He has received numerous accolades and awards for his work on repairing the EA-6B electronic offensive aircraft. His expertise has resulted in a number of successful missions during war operations.

After the Navy, he worked in a number of manufacturing plants, performing electronics technician, engineering, and supervisory duties.

He worked on everything from automotive maintenance / repair, medical equipment and concrete construction to cable television infrastructure. He designed small printed circuit boards to prevent them from invasively connecting to advanced CNC and robotic machines.

While working as a production supervisor for the MRI coil manufacturer, he was approached by Tesla Motors and eventually recruited to "Gigafactory 1" in Nevada.

After working for a year as a technology leader at Tesla, he has witnessed security, waste and abuse issues several times. After making several attempts to remedy the problems, he went to the media with his evidence.

On June 20, 2018, Tesla retaliated and filed a lawsuit against it along with a number of false allegations against which litigation is currently pending in the U.S. justice system.

He moved to Hungary with his wife and son and still lives here.
